ABOUT THE COURSE

The ITEC Course on the theme Preventing the Menace of Human Trafficking – Issues, Challenges and Prevention is a special initiative of the SCLML at RRU to intricately study, analyze and strategize to mitigate the horrendous menace of human trafficking in the society.

The University aims to provide comprehensive education, research, training and extension in all aspects of national security and policing and retired personnel from military and paramilitary forces, security and intelligence agencies, police establishments and civilian student communities.

The Issue –

Human Trafficking though an internationally recognized offence is prevalent in nearly all regions of the world and in various capacities and serves as a major blot on the human rights assurance of the nations. Accordingly, this is an international issue, and from the security perspective it becomes pertinent for the international stakeholders to know each and every nuance of the said crime which shall include the international instruments, the criminal liabilities, the socio-legal scenario, the prevention mechanism and the way forward.

The Course –

On the above-mentioned lines, this ITEC course shall serve as an apt platform for RRU's partner institutions and the enforcement agencies to be trained about this organized crime in an efficient, planned and timely manner. The modules in the course shall be comprehensive and robust in nature to help the trainee know multiple dimensions associated with human trafficking. It shall be a ____ (one)/(10) _____ week/days course of ____ (30) _____ hours comprising of offline lectures being delivered by concerned resource persons and respective faculty members of the University.

Objectives –

1. To bring a comprehensive and robust understanding of human trafficking and its effect on society.
2. To create the pool of expert and professional with the security education, practical knowledge for policy, rehabilitation and preventions of human trafficking.
3. To provide the extension services for those who are working in the government agencies in human trafficking through certification.
